ACE Interactive to showcase at NASPL

LAS VEGAS, NV, 18th September 2008 – Aristocrat announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary Ace Interactive will once again be displaying its products at the North American Association of State and Provincial Lotteries (NASPL) trade show, which will be held in Philadelphia, September 24th-27th.

Roy Garrett, Director of Business Development, America for ACE Interactive, states: "For regulatory, economical and, equally important, responsible gaming initiatives, the North American video lottery marketplace is preparing to experience a major paradigm shift. In addition, several major initiatives are currently underway in North America to introduce the latest technologies into existing and new jurisdictions. With ACE Interactive's appearance at NASPL, we intend to demonstrate that, with our TruServ™ Server Based Gaming platform, we have the product and solution to respond to this rapidly approaching change in the video lottery business environment. Also, with our two very distinct video lottery terminals, Viridian™ and Indago™, we are able to provide a competitive product for any video lottery jurisdiction."

Walt Hawkins, Vice President of Business Development for Aristocrat Technologies Inc., adds: "We are very excited about this opportunity to showcase ACE Interactive products combined with Aristocrat's top performing game content at NASPL in Philadelphia and look forward to welcoming the conference attendees to our exhibit booth."
